SIGNS OF MARIJUANA ADDICTION AND ABUSE

Distorted perception

Smoking up is known to cause distorted perception. The high feeling can alter the user's perception by clouding his mind and/or increasing his senses and perception of reality.

Having a difficult time solving problems

Solving problems is difficult enough when a person is sober. Smoking weed makes even trivial everyday problems seem really hard. They often stay unsolved when a person is high.

Learning and memory issues

Marijuana causes learning and memory issues and that was proved by medical research. Being high makes it really hard to remember new information. Connecting the dots is sometimes impossible.

Red Eyes

Pot heads are known to have red eyes. That happens because they get dryer because of the effect of THC on one's organism. They are also known as lazy eyes.

Dry mouth

Smoking marijuana always causes the user's mouth to dry out completely. That can be a huge problem if one needs to speak and express his or hers thoughts.

Anxiety and paranoia

Anxiety and paranoia are probably the most experienced side effects of smoking pot. The heart rate goes up followed by heavy breathing which can lead to the sense of panic.

Coordination problems

Like with all other psychoactive substances, THC, the active ingredient in marijuana causes coordination problems. When under the influence, the user has problems completing even the basic coordination tasks.

Loss of control

The state of being high can cause the user to lose control over himself completely. This happens because his thoughts and perceptions are altered and he no longer has control over his action.
